Abstract	This MOOC, a result of the project "Mobilizing university-community resources through SL(M) for the inclusion of migrants/refugees" funded by the European Union's Erasmus+ Programme (2022-1-ES01-KA220-HED-000087650), aims to train university professors in the use of this methodology in order to address the needs of migrants and refugees with their students and contribute to their inclusion. However, it is also a course that students and staff can take to gain training in this reality and learn the methodology. The course is based on the idea that universities and social organizations are central actors in society in the fight against extremism and xenophobia, strengthening European identity based on a shared and cohesive citizenship. Society is experiencing rapid changes in areas such as increased mobility and cultural diversity resulting from the rise in migratory movements. Those taking this course will gain insight into the reality of migrants and refugees in order to propose actions that promote the inclusion process as a two-way process. Thus, we propose the Service-Learning (SL) methodology because it supports the social mission of the university and a more comprehensive education of students as responsible citizens, by creating exchange situations in which diversity is a central element. This methodology requires students to test skills related to their curriculum in the "real world" in order to respond to an identified need in their environment and build knowledge through critical reflection on the experience. The impact of this methodology on students' views of diversity has been demonstrated, as it allows them to confront personal or social stereotypes, acquire knowledge about the population served, believe in the value of an intercultural society, feel more comfortable interacting in diverse contexts, and recognize universality and commonalities.

Objectives and learning outcomes	This MOOC is not limited to providing pedagogical tools, as it also focuses on training about cultural diversity and the situation of migration and refugee status in Europe. Specifically, our objectives are: - To understand the reality of migrants/refugees in Europe. - To study the social needs of refugees/migrants in Europe. - To promote SL at the university as a social learning methodology. - To design SL projects focused on the inclusion needs of migrants/refugees. Ultimately, we hope to convey the message of how we can contribute to the European intercultural project by introducing the SL methodology at the university. We hope that university students will perceive this course as an opportunity to acquire knowledge and skills that will enable them to be agents of change in their educational communities and in society at large.
